

Library Television Network

Producing high-quality programming to inform and educate the citizens of West Virginia on public libraries and state government.

TV Show “Distress Signals” Takes Aim at Flu Season

Winter is back and with it comes the flu season. It’s another winter worry West Virginians need to be on guard against to stay healthy.

Recently, the host of the locally produced TV show “Distress Signals” on the Library Channel sat down with the Director of the West Virginia Division of Immunization Services to talk about why this particular virus keeps coming back in full force every winter.

The show aired several times in November on Suddenlink cable channel 17. The segment is called Seasonal Flu, Clues & Prevention and is produced by the West Virginia Library Channel. Host Al Lisko talks with Immunization Services Director Jeff Neccuzi.

Click on the link below, then under show topic, click on Seasonal Flu, Clues & Prevention.

<http://www.librarycommission.wv.gov/programs/ltn/videoserver/Pages/distresssignals.aspx>